"God Save the King" was sung ir honor of the toast of "The King."

"Our Guests" was enthusiastically received and Capt. Phillips replied on behalf of the team. He thanked the company present for the honor they had done him and his associates and promised that he and his team would prove themselves even more worthy, if given a chance. In conclusion he said he felt more at home on the ice than making a speech. N

THE PEOPLE. What strange psychological pheno mena are the cause of the waves of thought which sweep periodically over the earth. Republicanism spread like smallpox undeterred by oceans and continents, Imperialism seizes a monarchy and a republicat the same time. A chain of thought-an idea-a theory are born apparently simultaneously in widely separated countries, which go through the same struggles and the s me strenuous propaganda to convert the unbelievers to the new doctrine. It is thus with muricipal ownership: what possessed the people of Rat Portage and the people Port Arthur and ists to this day. Toronto to vote so overwhelmingly on the same day in favor of a certain theory? There has been no education of a specific nature for the people, that would lead to such a change; and the intricacies of municipal economy are not learnt in a day, neither are the scientific points of the public ownership theory understanded by casual reading, and yet, the people are not moral, but is developing intellectually. The people now understand things which muddled a philosopher a hundred years ago. It came easily however, for the people had nothing to unlearn, as they never studied the text books of the Manchester school, and they quickly learnt the opposite of Samuel Smiles, selfish kelp doctrine, whose teachings told howaman might get along in the world. Nowadays a min does not ask himself how can I prosper-but how can we prosper and make the best of our country? We are living in an age of combinations and trusts, and the people are beginning to realize that they also must combine for mutual protection-and hence the municipal and public ownership

Later successes were his laughing song-a real side-splitquencies of the late Mr. Biggar and others. The Royal was perhaps the hall in which he was most appreciated, but it was at the Tivoli that he took his benefit in 1899 on retiring from the boards. The Eagle, or Grecian Saloon, in the City Road, inspired that immortal ballad, "Pop Goes the Weasel." Why a weasel should pop is a mystery that has baffled all the efforts of the natural

It stands to reason that after the wild expenditure of carearing up and down the City Road, paying the admission and concomitant expenses in the Eagle, the best means of replen-ishing the purse was to 'pop the weasel,' anglice, pawn the family jewels or plate: It strikes me as a greater mystery why such a song ever took the town, though we have in later days had equally insane and idiotic ditties, to wit, "Ta-rara-boom-de-ay," and others, which most of your readers will, no doubt. be able to call to mind.-Londor Telegraph.

One of the last surviving of the old English sumptuary laws, now almost forgotten, but considered of great importance in maintaining one branch of Sheffleld trade, was that directed against covered buttons. The town dealt largely in horn buttons of different kinds for common wear, as well as in metal and plated bottons for the better class of coats. waistcoats and gaiters. From 1720 to the end of the century the town annals show that there was considerable though fitful zeal, under the statute of 8 Anne, against the vendors and users of covered buttons.

Address by Mrs Dignam to Toronto Women's Art Association

At a recent meeting of the Woman's Art Association in Toronto. Mrs. Dignam gave a lecture on "How to Learn to Tell What is Good in a Picture." Mrv. Dignam said that there was a time when none but the artist' was supposed to be able to understand pictures. The processes of creating were enveloped in invsterv. This age, intelligent and analytical. has clamored for understanding, with the result that few are the secrets not wrested from the once hallowed mysterious pale of the ar-tists' workshop. Criticism is on the lips of everyone without hesitoney. Marvelous skill has been developed among our own townsmen in trivial criticism, the chief aim being not to find the good but to detects trivial faults. Missing all truth; and purpose, taking no account of the excellences, in unpetuous haste to find fault, it being a nistaken idea athat fault-finding is the function of the art critic.

Studying pictures is like studying common beings. If we start out on voyage to discover good we shall be rewarded by an ever increasing capacity to discover good. An increasing capacity to discern bad is much too rapidly induced. The inmocent; good-natured exuberance of the careless observer who exclaims: the careies boserer who examined is in that just swell?" "That's lovely," Just smell that rose," "I love kittens." is much less hurtful then the carping, fault-finding critic, and preferable to the stolid indifference of the person who is afraid of showing ignorance if he let any emotion escap.

Pictures show the limitations of the artist and cannot contain or uggest a greater thought than he can conceive. A serious student of pictures knows human nature, and will readily recognize the strenuous and uncompromising life of a Francois Millet, the frugal life and poetic musings of a Corot, the full, luxur-iant life of a Rousseau and a Diaz, with their dream days of sparkling sunshine and humorous shadows; the quiet, pastoral life of Meuve, or the poetical abstraction of Chanyannes.

Three classes of prople study pictures-the pedagogue, who nims at being an honorary referee; the cumulative, gathering facts and incidents to retail them in conversation; and the honest picture-lover. Hunt says it takes as much love to criticize a picture as to paint it. "I hope our present conditions of criticism de not show an equation."

THAT DIVISION.

Our article in the last issue of the Miner anent the division of the West Algoma constituency has created a great amount of comment and discus sion. It appears that many people did not realize what was contemplated in the proposed redistribution, and they were quite surprised and very indigpant to learn that half of Thunder bay district was being taken away from us to make a new constituency, and to lessen the chances of Rainy River becoming a riding. The matter is now being taken up, however, and there is no doubt but that proper representations made to our member, Mr. Conmee, will result in the abandonment of that part of the bill dividing West Algoma.

most forgotten, but considered of great importance in maintaining one branch of Sheffield trade, was that directed against covered buttons. The town dealt largely in horn buttons of different kinds for common wear, as well as in metal and plated bottons for the better class of coats. waistcoats and gaiters. From 1720 to the end of the century the town annals show that there was considerable though fitful zeal, under the statute of 8 Anne, against the 'vendors and users of covered buttons. The King's State Carriage.

King Edward's state carriage is worthy of a detailed description. It was made for George III. nearly a century and a half ago, from design of Sir William Chambers, the distinguished architect. It weighs no less than four tons. The panels were painted by Cipriani, the door-panel being emballished the Royal Arms, in true heraldic colors. On each side panel appears the collar of the Order of the Garter, with the figure of St. George and the Dragon. A little upright gilt ornament, in the design of which the rose. thistie and shamrock are introduced, runs in badly ventilated homes, efficient round the roof, on which are represented the crown and scopere. TIES OF AFFECTION

CONTRIBUTE MUCH TOWARDS MAK-ING THE KING'S BIRTHDAY.

Whole Royal Family Units in Spending Much Thought and Care on Their Presents to the Head of the Household-The King at Home-How He Euloys This Yearly Family Gathering.

The anniversary of King Edward's birth is always a day of great retolding in his own family. The firm ties of affection which bind all the members to each other are proverbial, and any event in the life of one affects them all. Hence, much care and thought are previously expended on the choice of presents for this particular birthday. each one of the circle preparing obtaining something that is either wanted or has been admired. days gone by, when the King's children and their pocket money was limited, the offerings ofton consisted of little articles solely prepared by themselves, such as elaborate penwipers or worked tobacco pouches. But, although the presents of later years have been of a much more costly kind it is perfectly safe to assert that quite as much pleasure was felt by His Malesty on the receipt of the former as of the latter,

On the morning of Nov. 9 it is usual for the King and Queen to depart from the frequent custom of breakfasting in their own apartments and to take the first meal of the day in company with all the members of the family who are staying with them. The mair bag of this morning is of a prodigious size, in fact, the carrying capacity of the mounted groom who usually rides to Wolferton for the letters is altogether inadequate. Huge bags of letters, an unlimited number of packages of all and hundreds of telegrams which latter come direct over the private wire from the central office ... mark the happy event. Literally from all parts of England, the Continent and the British dominions, from emperors, princes, officials, publie hodles and private fodividuals come the time-honored words, "Many happy returns of the day," accompanied by some suitable token from royal relatives.

The family presents adorn the breakfast-table, or are in convenient proximity, in the good old-fashioned way, and His Majesty's grandchildrun are not behindhand, but pay an early visit with their little offerings, their small voices, too, swelling the general chorus. The presents take a variety of forms - silver models of favorite horses, handsome inkstands, or riding whips, choice curios, paintings or sketches, or handsomely bound volumes of prose or poetry, for although the King is essentially a practical man, be is a great admirer of certain modern poets, chief of whom stands Sir Edwin Arnold and Mr. Swinburne.

A shooting party is generally organized so as soon as the King can dispose of his correspondence, all the gentlemen of the party start of , for the preserves, the ladies of the family generally arranging to meet them a little later in the morning. This shoot is generally the biggest of the year, and the day being always observed as a general heliday on the estate, every inhabitant of each village gets up with the reselute determinution of putting in an appearance at the event. The shooting of the their aunties, have soon afterwards to retire from the circle for their respective nurseries in the house, while the adults of the company separate until such time as they shall assemble in the drawing-room, a few minutes previous to the dinner hour. Very beautiful is the scene when all are assembled around the large oval table. The apartment itself is of stately proportions, and the tables are exquisitely decorated with the choicest of flowers, the electric lights flashing on the beautiful plate and the gilttering jewels worn by the Oueen and the Princesses present. The menu is a special one for the auspicious occasion, the good old English plum pudding occupying the Just knew me for his mother, and he died premier place among the sweets.

The after-dinner events vary. one time it was the custom for large ball to be given. There is magnificent ballroom at Sandringham - lofty, well ventilated, with a splendid floor, a musicians' gallery at one end, and walls rich in decorations, consisting of Indian arms and trophies, which were brought home by His Majesty when he returned To threat and pray Thee that Thou hold Pierce regarding from his eastern visit. general chorust. The presents take a variety of forms - silver models of favorite horses, handsome inkstands or riding whips, choice curios, paintings for sketches, or handsomely bound volumes of prose or poetry, for although the King is essentially a practical man, he is a great admirer of certain modern poets, chief of whom stands Sir Edwin Arnold and Mr. Swinburne. A shooting party is generally organized, so as soon as the King can dispose of his correspondence, all the gentlemen of the party start on .jor the preserves, the ladies of the family generally arranging to meet them e little later in the morning. This shoot is generally the biggest of the year, and the day being always observed as a general holiday on the estate, every inhabitant of each village gets up with the resolute determination of putting in an appearance at the event. The shooting of the Avenue, then, which is a fixture for the King's Birthday, is exceedingly well attended, the villages being almost entirely descrited. The sight is extremely picturesque, the bright colors worn by the beaters standing out in vivid relief against the green of the pines and the velvety turf. and the red sand of the intervening roads and paths. Big bags are the rule, the villagers, participating later in the day in the share of the contents. The luncheon hour finds the royal family and the numerous guests assembled, but no one lingers over the meal, for all the employes of the estate have a special dinner provided for them in the riding school, and the King, Queen and femily make an invariable custom of being present for a short time. The tables literally groan beneath their weight of good things, and the gatherings are delightfully hearty, the King enter-ing into the spirit of the thing with the utmost good nature, listening attentively to the formal speech the principal employe, or to occasional shyly offered individual congratulations. His Majesty's health is drunk with a three times three: if anyone ever doubted the shouting capacities of a group Englishmen, he would speedily have such doubts set at rest were he to be present at the King's Norfolk birthday dinner.

In the afternoon the women and children are regaled, a festival tea being arranged on their behalf, and, if the King does not find time to be present at this, the Queen and her daughters do, and they may be generally seen in the vicinity of the children's tables, looking after their particular pleasures and requirements. His Majesty has a busy only. but whatever part of his usual rout ine he is compelled to forego, rest asoured that an inspection of stables and kennels is never omitted for the King is a genuine animal lovknowledge of horses and dogs. These are housed to perfection, and not the escapes the King's keen eye in his daily perambulations.

". . . That thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the chirch of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth.

Behavior in the church is an important matter and by many receives all toslittle consideration. As referred unwell for some time and is returning to in the words of Paul the question raised is not one merely of conduct, in the place of worship, but, of character The Old Timers have decided to hold and action as a member and officer of their annual banquet in the opera the great organization we call the church. There are great laws or principles of behavior in the church. As the professional, the social life, so is there an etiquette of church life. will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from onefourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day vou will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

Sanctimoniousness and guile must not mark our behavior in the church of God The most important question. originally, in connection with a building, is the character of the material. Poor stone caused recently the ruin of a sacred edifice, and the death of a minister of the Gospel, together with ome workmen. We are to be living tones in the temple of Godi V 2. Matual confidence and helpfulness. A building is not a hear. The heap and building may have the same material, but one is organized material and theother among mized. The church is a building and its materials or members are organized and bound together in durable bands. The church is also an organism. It is the body of Christ. This further impresses the thought that the members have intimate relainto solid norse the materials of the building. Butflove, expressing itself know that we are my disciples if ye love, the putting away of all malice, we "bear one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ."

3. Active service. The church is not so much a haven of rest as a hive of activity. We are in it to work, to use our gate, to spend our gloney, to be followers of Him who went about continucity doing good.

Thus we may conclude while with final word saving that only as we behave ourselves in the church of God hele dan we hope for admission to God's presence in glory, for Scripture assures that only be that both clean hands and a pure heart, and that hath not lifted up his soul to vanity, nor sworp deceitfully, and that bath distributed and visited to poor, and visit ed the sick and imprisened can ascend-into the hill of vod and stand in His-holy place.
